

The Move:

*A Traffic Cop Gets a Phone Call
That Everyone Is Dead*

STEP 1.

You are a traffic cop — kind of depressed, kind of bossy, minding your own business.

STEP 2.

It sure is bright out. Do you smell that?
You are getting stinky from working so hard. Think, "I loves me job."

STEP 3.

Hear your cell phone ring. It is against company policy, but you decide to answer it. All your friends and family know not to call you during work hours, so this could be important.

STEP 4.

A voice on the other line says, "Everyone is dead, except me and you!"
Click.

STEP 5.

Think to yourself, "That was weird."

STEP 6.

Wait a minute. You did notice that there was no traffic today, or airplanes. You then realize that you are one of the last two people on earth and the other person is a dude.